The Missing Boy

Caroline Bullock

Description

A boy goes missing from France in 2000 leaving behind a solitary red shoe.

A boy goes missing from England a year later and haunts a tight knit community ever since.

A remote French church holds clues that suggests the unthinkable.

Intent on professional redemption, troubled journalist, Leah Chase is back at her local newspaper and soon at the heart of a haunting mystery. In a community with more secrets than answers it seems only she can turn up the heat on a 15-year cold case.

Biography

Caroline Bullock is a Lancashire born international journalist now based in West Sussex. She began her career in local news and now covers business for The Times and Financial Times and is a political and cultural columnist for the Daily Express, Daily Mail and the New York Post writing across both the UK and US political and cultural agenda.

The Missing Boy is her first novel. Inspired in part by her early career on local newspapers, a long-term love affair with France and interest in cold case crime.
